Plain Sailing? Brittany Ferries Celebrates Its Fifty Years With Twinners

On Monday 2nd January Twinners from all over Devon joined Twinners from Brittany and distinguished guests aboard the 'flagship' of the Brittany Ferries fleet - the Pont-Aven - in Plymouth for a party. The party was to celebrate 50 years of the company's existence. A company which has come a very long way since its original conception and early beginnings. Fifty years ago a group of French farmers in Brittany realised there was an opportunity to export their fresh produce to the UK and they used one ship to transport cauliflowers and artichokes to ports along the south coast. Soon they realised there was a demand for human transport too and that is how they began to grow and became not just a freight line but a passenger line also. Brittany farmers still own 50 per cent of the shares in the company.

Whilst it is true that we as Twinners soaked up the free hospitality of Brittany Ferries, I feel we were all a very good advertisement for the strength of and meaning of Twinning, and it was the most sociable and convivial of events. I felt proud to represent Axminster Twinning Association but I also felt proud of the movement, and the fact that Brittany Ferries reached out to us speaks volumes.

I understand that it happened like this. Brittany Ferries had the idea that to celebrate their 50 years they would transport Breton Twinners from Roscoff to Plymouth and invite their 'homologues' or other Twinning representatives from Devon to join them aboard. However this invitation was undersubscribed and then someone had the excellent idea (I think it is Ann Hallett from Starcross we have to thank for this) that via the Devon Twinning Circle the invitation could be extended to towns in Devon twinned with Normandy. This is how my husband and I got involved. (Axminster is twinned with Douvres la Délivrande in Normandy). There then followed an over-subscription and sadly not everyone who applied could be accommodated.

Even though the Pont-Aven was at anchor in Plymouth we had all the usual check-ins - passport control, body and luggage searches, and a long wait during which we met Twinners from Brecon (is that in Devon??!!) carrying a very heavy package to give to their friends from Gouesnou who they were meeting aboard. Whilst queueing we had also met the retired financial manager who then became the managing director of Brittany Ferries who told us that the cost of building the Pont-Aven twenty years ago was 200 million pounds.

Once in the sumptuous bar as we were not meeting 'homologues' we fell into conversation with others. An elderly man from Brest, Monsieur François Le Breton (coincidental name!) the captain of the Pont-Aven, a current Pilot who'd brought the ferry to Plymouth that day, and a retired Pilot who had worked for Brittany Ferries at Portsmouth for 40 years and who spoke of some of the changes he'd seen: 'when we started the boats were small; now they are huge.'

Moët et Chandon flowed and canapés were carried round by waiters and waitresses. The loud music being played through speakers did make conversation difficult but soon there was a change in the proceedings and there was an announcement about photographs and then the live music began, played by the Breton band Dremmwel, billed on the programme thus: 'whose gentle tunes have been used as wake-up music in our cabins for decades'. This was not a view shared by the partner of the Pilot who told us that these dulcet tones made her feel suicidal first thing in the morning!

While the music played more champagne bottles were uncorked and more platters of canapés were produced. Eventually to the accompaniment of a traditional Breton tune a snake of dancers joined hands spontaneously and threaded their way through the assembled crowd.

We headed towards the restaurant and fell into conversation with two French women who told us that there were 350 guests here this evening. This same pair became our table companions. The younger woman was getting anxious as her brother was one of the chefs and she knew that things were running a bit late and that this was difficult when you were catering for such large numbers. She was 'présidente' of the

We began with the ever-wonderful self-service buffet with no system in place so it became a bit of a scramble! This was followed by chicken cooked in cider with pasta and vegetables in a sage butter, and then a delicate green bombe of fluff and filling on a bed of glistening paper-thin slices of Granny Smith apples. The white wine was Sancerre, the red Noaillac.

After the meal there were speeches but the geography of the dining area prevented us from having sight of the speakers. So we just listened. Eventually the group of seven chefs in their tall hats came out from the kitchen and there was clapping and adulation and more words spoken.

We'd been told that without fail we needed to get off the boat by 9.00pm to avoid being taken back to Roscoff but I overheard as we were leaving that the sailing had been delayed until 11.00pm just to be on the safe side!

Thank you to Brittany Ferries for a wonderful reception and an event that illuminated an otherwise dark winter's night.

Braunton Twinning Association

As members of the Braunton Twinning Association (Linda and Dave) were proud to be asked to represent their Group at the recent Brittany Ferries 50th Anniversary celebrations on board the Port Aven in Plymouth. We met up with two of our French friends from Plouescat and were treated to a very special evening of music, wine and food and especially friendship. We also made some new friends along the way.

KINGSTEIGNTON – ORBEC TWINNING ASSOCIATIONS

On Saturday 22nd October, 40 adults and 11 children from Orbec and La Vespiere, in Normandy, arrived in Devon to spend a short but much anticipated few days' stay with Kingsteignton and Orbec Twinning Association host families locally. KOTA members were delighted to see their French friends in person after the annual Twinning Exchange visits had to be suspended due to the Covid pandemic.

KOTA members always enjoy wonderful hospitality and a full programme of entertainment when visiting Orbec and La Vespiere and try to ensure our longstanding friends from France have a similar experience. The photo above shows Kingsteignton Mayor Cllr Ron Peart extending the formal welcome to our visitors, with Gisele Motio, President of Orbec Twinning Association and Orbec Councillor Virginie Mil responding on behalf of our visitors and the Mayor of Orbec, all announced by Kingsteignton Town Crier Jackie Edwards. KOTA Chairman James Woulfe added the Members' welcome and Luc Desandre acted as Interpreter. Ines Chabanne is the current holder of the historic title, used in years gone by to describe a "lady-in-waiting" to a high ranking lady of the French court.

The Twinning bonds are forty three years strong and many of the current KOTA members were founding 'twinners'. Over the years KOTA and Orbec memberships have grown and ages of members now span 5 to 90+ years.

Our French friends are guests of KOTA and local hosts when visiting Devon, with KOTA twinning receiving similar generosity when in France. The visit's Programme of Activities is varied and caters for members of all ages and is funded through regular fundraising and social activities and successful applications for appropriate Grants.

Following the Reception Supper on Saturday evening, held in the town's Council Offices' Hall, host families enjoyed spending Sunday with their visitors in many different and exciting ways: visiting local places of interest, journeying up the River Exe and cream tea on board, always popular visits to Dartmoor to see the ponies .... families even travelled to London by train to visit the sights and shops, riding on the London Eye during their visit.

On Monday, the final day of the visit, everyone joined in the fun of a morning at Dingles' Heritage Fairground near Lifton. Everyone enjoyed the various indoor funfair rides – the Ghost Train and Dodgems had particular appeal – and the Museum displayed the showmen and women's way of life in days gone by.

We bade our friends au revoir early the next day, with our very best wishes and thanks for travelling to spend time with us the bon voyage. We hope to meet again in Orbec and La Vespiere next year!
